Not illustrated. 1886 Excerpt: . . . give four tons it requires no arithmetic to show that the extra cost of plowing the trash under is a mere nothing In comparison to the gain. In these days when every dollar and every pound of sugar counts, it behooves planters to pay attention to the leaks, and one of our biggest leaks is the neglect of the fertilizers which are already in the field, to be had for the labor of putting them under ground, but which a large portion of our planters are every year wasting in smoke. Dont burn off the fields. Plow the trash under. It pays. 0 THE COCOANUT OIL AND FIBRE INDUSTRY IN BRITISH GUIANA. In view of the project of establishing the cocoanut oil business in Honolulu, which has lately been discussed, the following description of an oil and fibre works known as the Fortitude Plantation, in British Guiana, written by Hon. B. Howard Jones, and published by the Agricultural Society of British Guiana, is of interest. The factory is divided into distinct operations--the oil department and the fibre--the motive power for both being a 14 horse-power Bobey patent engine, working with a pressure of 60 lbs. to the square inch. The nuts are first divested of their fibrous covering in the yard by manual labor, 60 cents per thousand being the price paid for this work, which consists simply of splitting the husk on the sharp edge of a hoe fixed in the ground, no better method...
